Challenges

The industry is evolving at a faster pace than ever before—drug manufacturers are tasked with managing an unprecedented frequency, uncertainty, and complexity of reporting requirements. In concert with maintaining compliance across a broad range of government regulations, companies must also align their gross-to-net strategies across the business. A slight error in calculations can cause millions of dollars in overpayments. Additionally, businesses face the potential threat of non-compliance, which can translate into a tarnished brand, large fines, or even jail time. It is essential that price and rebate discounts are correctly handled, on time, and for the right amount.

On average, manufacturers have paid $7.35 million for a single overcharge penalty since 2012.

In the past 5 years, TWICE as many overcharge cases have been brought against manufacturers than the previous 10 year period.
